Kazakhstan national currency (tenge) was introduced on November 15, 1993. Since 1997 this day has been observed as a professional holiday of employees of the financial system of the Republic of Kazakhstan – the Day of national currency (in accordance with decree No. 3753 of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan dated November 13, 1997 and decree No. 3827 of the President of the Republic of Kazakhstan dated January 20, 1998). November 15 is a Kazakhstan holiday according to the Law of the Republic of Kazakhstan "On Holidays in Republic of Kazakhstan".

KASE history began two days after tenge had been introduced. On November 17, 1993 the National Bank of the Republic of Kazakhstan and 23 leading commercial banks of Kazakhstan decided to establish a currency exchange. The newly established exchange was assigned to organize and develop the national currency market due to introduction of tenge. On December 30, 1993 KASE was registered as Kazakh Inter-bank Currency Exchange closed joint-stock company, and has been operating under the current name since April 1996.
